Key facts

Adults get money in different ways such as working, benefits or as a gift.

We all have vital basic needs, such as food, clothes and somewhere to live.

This block contains three illustrations representing basic needs. On the left is a brick house with a chimney, labeled 'House'. In the center is a collection of various fruits and vegetables, labeled 'Food'. On the right is a collection of clothing items including a hoodie, t-shirts, and trousers, labeled 'Clothes'.

Our interests can help us to decide what job we want to do.

This block features five illustrations of different jobs. From left to right: a female doctor in a white coat holding a clipboard, labeled 'Doctor'; a male builder in a yellow safety vest holding a blue hard hat, labeled 'Builder'; a male gardener in a green apron holding a potted plant and a knife, labeled 'Gardener'; a male police officer in a black uniform and helmet, labeled 'Police Officer'; and a male chef in a white uniform and tall hat, labeled 'Chef'.

People earn different amounts of money depending on their job. Money can be a reason why people choose a particular job.

Sometimes we need to save money to be able to buy things we want

This block contains eight illustrations of items that people might want to buy. From top left to bottom right: a bag of potato crisps, labeled 'Crisps'; a bottle of orange juice, labeled 'Juice'; a pile of colorful sweets, labeled 'Sweet'; a red and white striped bucket of popcorn, labeled 'Popcorn'; a stack of colorful books, labeled 'Books'; a pile of colorful Lego bricks, labeled 'Lego'; a jigsaw puzzle showing a globe, labeled 'Jigsaw'; and a board game with pieces and a board, labeled 'Board games'.
